CONSTITUTIONAL ETHOS II
Unity in Diversity - Secularism

INTRODUCTION

“Our ability to reach unity in diversity will be the beauty and the test of our civilization.”
Mahatma Gandhi

The ethnic, linguistic and religious diversity of India is the soul of India. It is one of the most noticeable characteristics of Indian Civilization and great strength of our composite culture. As a matter of faith for India, the Constitution of India aims to protect this unity (not uniformity) through Secularism.

In this article, we will discuss the Constitutional Ethos of Secularism, starting with a basic theoretical idea on Secularism. It is followed by a brief idea on Indian Secularism and the related Constitutional provisions. Based on the provisions, the objectives behind them are identified along with the significance of Secularism. At the same time, based on the implementation measures and outcomes, the related concerns and challenges are identified in Indian Secularism; followed by a way forward in order to preserve and promote the unity in diversity.
PRINCIPLE OF SECULARISM: MEANING AND EMERGENCE

The word ‘secular’ is derived from the Latin word ‘saeculum’ meaning century or age. Saeculum represents the profane (non-religious) time. Secularism first emerged as a normative or political doctrine in Europe (refer image).

The idea of Secularism seeks to achieve a secular society, i.e., one devoid of either inter-religious or intra-religious domination by making religion a personal affair by following certain principles (see image).

- It diminishes the influence of religious institutions and symbols (non-spiritual) in people’s lives. So, secularism is a doctrine which commands distinct, independent, exclusive and separate spheres of state power and religion with no overlapping zones, i.e.
  - No State interference in the affairs of religion,
  - No religious interference in the affairs of State.

EMERGENCE OF SECULARISM

STAGE 1

THIRTY YEARS WAR

A series of wars fought by various nations from 1618 to 1648 for various reasons, including religious, dynastic, territorial, and commercial rivalries.

STAGE 2

SEPARATION

The war weakened the Holy Roman Empire, resulting into the separation of religious authority from political authority.

STAGE 3

SECULARISATION

Public offices in western nations went through a "secularisation" process, i.e., gradual retreat of religion from guiding policies and functions in public life.

PRINCIPLES OF SECULARISM

- SEPARATION
  - Separation between religious institutions and state institutions.
  - No Domination of Religion in public sphere.

- FREEDOM
  - Freedom to practice one’s faith or belief without harming others,
  - Freedom to change it or not have one, based on one’s own conscience

- EQUALITY
  - No advantage or disadvantage of having or not having religious beliefs

---

Secularism in India

- Has ancient roots: Traditionally, Indian Society has lived with separation between state and religion. According to Kautilya’s Arthashastra (a moral guide for the Kingship), the happiness of a king lies in the happiness of his subjects. It helped in creating religious tolerance in India despite its religious pluralism.

- Is different from the West: Unlike the West, in India no clear divide exists between religion and science or between religion and atheism. E.g., Indian philosophy includes orthodox Astika School of thoughts as well as the unorthodox Nastika School of thoughts.

- Took shape with India’s struggle for independence: Inter-religious and intra-religious domination still existed in India, leading to the rise of secularism in its modern sense in India during the 19th century. Starting with the cultural and religious reform movements, soon it became a feature of the Indian political movement – underlining the importance of people’s unity against colonialism and communalism.

SECULARISM AS CONSTITUTIONAL ETHOS IN INDIA: ITS NATURE, PROVISIONS AND OBJECTIVES

Though the word ‘secular’ was explicitly added in the preamble only during the 1975 emergency (42nd Amendment to the Constitution, 1976), secularism has been an integral part of the Constitution since its beginning.

But the Indian Model of Secularism differs from the Western Model of Secularism. The Constitution mandates the Indian State to be secular in terms of having a ‘principled distance between religion and politics’. The main idea behind Indian Secularism, in words of Pt. Jawaharlal Nehru was:

“It does not mean a society where religion is discouraged, it means freedom of religion and conscience, including freedom for those who may have no religion.’

Concept of Principled Distance

Given by Rajeev Bhargava, it represents a balanced distance of a state from the religious groups, i.e., a secular state may:
- Keep a principled distance from religion in all ways to promote peace between different religious communities.
- It may also intervene in the religious proceedings to protect the rights of specific communities.
- It gives equal preference to every religion and respects all equally. But it may interfere if religious groups try to exercise their power on the political and social life of the people.

Under Indian Secularism, no strict separation exists between religion and politics. The state doesn’t associate with any religion and honors all faiths equally. Also, it permits freedom of practicing any religion and takes into consideration the religious sentiment of the people. The main reasons behind this form of Indian Secularism are as given in the image.

This becomes clear from the constitutional provisions which mandate equality in all the major realms of Indian democracy such as law, education, economics, private and civic life of citizenry etc. E.g.

- Preamble of the Indian Constitution professes to secure to all its citizens:
  - Liberty of thought, expression, belief, faith and worship;
  - Equality of status and of opportunity.

OBJECTIVES OF INDIAN SECULARISM

- Protection of religious freedom of all citizens by making the state responsible for it
- Avoiding imposition of any particular religion from the state upon the rest of the people
- Prohibiting religious prosecution of individuals by ensuring equal support and protection from state to all
- Preventing domination of one religion over another or discrimination within the same religion, i.e. avoiding any discrimination in social, political and economic spheres
- Develop tolerance rather than isolation among people and religious faiths
SIGNIFICANCE OF SECULARISM IN INDIA

According to Paul R. Brass, secularism is ‘a countervailing practice, and a set of values that are essential to maintain balance in a plural society where the organization of intergroup violence is endemic, persistent, and deadly.’ Being a multi-religious country, Secularism, as basic feature of the Indian Constitution (Kesavananda Bharati case), helps to maintain the balance in various spheres such as:

- Prohibits State Patronage to any particular religion to avoid misuse of state power or have fair decision-making.
  - The Supreme Court (SC) observed that if religion is not separated from politics, the religion of the ruling party tends to become the state religion (S. R. Bommai v. Union of India).
- Promoting National unity and integrity by spreading democratic values like equality, religious tolerance etc.
- Guiding Laws and Policies in direction of building fraternity, amity and upholding of individual dignity of person as enshrined in the Constitution.
  - While recognizing the religious rights, the Constitution allows stopping practices which are repugnant to public order, health and morality.

IN CONVERSATION

Secular aspects in Indian Constitution

Vinay: Hey Vinay, I heard, you been studying Indian Constitution?

Vinay: Yes, I have. Why do you ask?

Vinay: Someone told me that the Preamble to the Constitution of India has changed over time. He implied that the Preamble is not the same as was adopted in 1950.

Vinay: That’s correct! In fact, the term “secular” and “socialist” were added to the Preamble by the 42nd Amendment Act, 1976.

Vinay: But what does being secular mean for India?

Vinay: In the simplest of terms, it implies that the Constitution ensures religious freedom and prohibits discrimination based on religion or caste.

Vinay: Are you referring to Article 25 and 26 of the Constitution?

Vinay: Yes precisely. They form the essence of religious equality in India.

Vinay: Thanks Vinay. That was insightful.
CONCERNS/CRITICISM OF INDIAN SECULARISM

No Universal Definition: The lack of universal definition of Secularism weakens Indian democratic system by allowing some actors to misinterpret and exploit the prevalent religious diversity for vested interests.

Polarization of Thoughts: Indian secularism has had limited success against sectarian or communal politics, leading to polarization of the thought process.

Though election laws try to stop the use of ascriptive identities, it is difficult for Election Commission to implement it as it will require de-recognizing political parties and debarring of candidates.

Curring religious freedom in some cases: Secularism is criticized for its interference in the religious freedom of communities. E.g.

It allows judicial and state interference into religious and cultural practices by subjecting freedom of religion to public order, health, and morality.

Weakening of the Secularization process: Unlike West, Indian Secularism doesn’t create strict separation between state and religion, limiting the secularization of people. For instance, religion still being one of the factors in the political process.

Secularization of People

Secularization is the action or process of cultural transition which gradually replaces religious values by nonreligious values.

Secularization of people represents a situation when social importance of religion declines in social and political affairs.

Secularization of people is aided by processes of:

- Popularization of scientific, rational worldview against prevalent myths, mysteries, miracles and magic.
- Promotion of modern education to develop critical consciousness against institutional and belief structures of religion.
- Promotion of pluralism at the level of social groups.

WAY FORWARD

Secularism builds nation-states by creating and preserving unity in diversity. Indian society and secularism has its own distinct objectives and features. To achieve them, it needs recognition and effort from all stakeholders:

Help in establishment of an Egalitarian Social Order by:
- Avoiding religious strife and its extremities like communal violence or religious domination.
- Stopping religious encroachment into secular activities, i.e. matters which are not purely religious.
- Allowing positive discrimination to correct historical wrongs. E.g. reservation in public employment and education.
- Preserves and Promotes Individual Rights which are vital for moral wellbeing and the fulfillment of material prosperity.
- Creates faith and confidence of all sections of society in the State.
- Promotes mutual respect between different religions, sects, etc.

Encourages development and growth by:
- Creating peace in India.
- Create global linkages and allure foreign investors through a positive image on India.
- Stops use of public revenues to promote any religion.
- Empowers the State to regulate any economic and financial activity associated with religious practice.

Social Sphere

Economic Sphere
CONCLUSION

Role of Executive: Responsible for the implementation and administration of enacted laws/policies, it should:
- Observe strict separation between state and religious institutions.
- Depoliticize secularism, i.e. to move it further into the domain of civil society to avoid its politicization.
- Protect Freedom of Speech and Expression of religious people as well as of those who oppose or question the religious beliefs.
- Build inter-religious and intra-religious harmony through social reforms and confidence building on special measures for minorities based on their importance.

Role of Legislature: Being responsible for enacting laws and holding executive responsible, it should:
- Encourage debate on tenets of secularism to identify its significance and improvements needed in Indian context.
- Hold the executive responsible towards implementation of the constitutional ethos of secularism and its associated principles.

Role of Society, including Media, Civil Society and Individuals:
- Treat religion as a personal affair and follow laws regardless of gender, religion (majority or minority), region etc.
- Strengthen Democracy through exercise of rights and duties responsibly.

Important SC judgements on Secularism

Abhiram Singh vs. C. D. Commachen (2017)
Appealing to the ascriptive identities of any candidate and that of the voters constitutes a ‘corrupt practice’ under Section 123 (3) of the Representation of the People Act, 1951

Indira Nehru Gandhi vs. Raj Narain (1975)
Secularism means that State shall have no religion of its own and all persons of the country shall be equally entitled to the freedom of their conscience and have the right to freely profess, practice and propagate any religion

Shayra Bano vs. Union of India (2017)
The practice of Talaq-e-biddat or Triple Talaq was declared illegal, holding that it is not protected under Article 25 of the Constitution as it is not an essential religious practice

The religious pluralism of India is the greatest strength of its democracy. The constitutional ethos of Secularism reinforces it by removing existing inequalities and helps communities in preserving their differences. It gives rise to state of togetherness or oneness which is assimilative as well as separate, i.e. Unity in diversity. With growing homogenization currents, these principles have become even more vital in preservation of India’s unique identity. In words of Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore:

“Let us unite, not in spite of our differences, but through them. For differences can never be wiped away, and life would be so much the poorer without them. Let all human races keep their own personalities, and yet come together, not in a uniformity that is dead, but in a unity that is living.”
CONSTITUTIONAL ETHOS II: UNITY IN DIVERSITY – SECULARISM

Indian Society is a plural society with multiplicity of religions as an important feature of it. To preserve this diversity and promote unity in diversity, Secularism acts as a countervailing practice and a set of values needed to maintain balance.
